Emerging concepts in medical and psychological anthropology

Eugene Raikhel
Comparative Human Development
Spring 2014

In this course we will read a selection of recent ethnographies to examine emerging topics, conceptual approaches and methods in medical and psychological anthropology. We will also focus closely on these ethnographies as texts, discussing their structure, style and rhetorical strategies – all with an eye to our own writing projects. Enrollment is subject to instructor's approval.

The books we are likely to read this spring are:

